

Jennifer Mitchell is a Principal Consultant with PB’s Strategic Advisory practice, and Manager of the Transportation Finance and Project Development group in the eastern US. She consults with local and state agencies on developing project financial plans and advancing projects through planning, design and construction phases. She is working on the funding and implementation plans for transit “mega-projects” in Honolulu, Los Angeles, and San Diego. Prior to joining PB she was Deputy Project Director for Finance with the Dulles Corridor Metrorail Project, which began construction in April 2008. Throughout her 15 years of experience in the industry, she has worked on the planning and implementation of toll roads, port, airports and transit projects in the U.S. and internationally.

Jennifer is currently Vice Chair of the Transportation Commission in the City of Alexandria, Virginia, and Vice Chair of APTA’s Metropolitan Planning Subcommittee. She has a Masters in Regional Planning from the University of North Carolina – Chapel Hill, and a Bachelor of Urban Planning from University of Virginia.
