

Jennifer Duval, AICP

Jen is a project manager and senior transportation planner with Jacobs in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She has 15 years of public and private experience ranging from evacuation planning and transportation incident management, to strategic planning and program management. She manages planning, traffic, and ITS (Intelligent Transportation Systems) projects for clients in the mid-Atlantic, specializing in emergency transportation planning. In addition to detour route development and transportation incident management solutions, she has authored evacuation plans, continuity of operations plans, and emergency operations plans for snow emergencies, bridge closures, radiological emergencies and toll operations. Prior to joining Jacobs in 2005, Jennifer worked as a city planner for the City of San Diego.

Jen holds a Master of City Planning degree from San Diego State University and a Bachelor of Arts in Geography from Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Virginia. Additionally, she holds several FEMA certifications including Active Shooter, Radiological Emergency Management, Emergency Planning, National Incident Management System (NIMS) and Exercise Design. Jennifer is a 2012 graduate of the WTS Leadership Program and was appointed as a director to the WTS International Foundation Board for the 2014-2016 term. Prior to serving on the Foundation Board, she served on the WTS Philadelphia Chapter Board as Programs Chair, Scholarship Chair, and Awards Co-Chair. Jen is also a member of the Transportation Research Board Committee on Women's Issues in Transportation.
